NEWS RELEASE

February 26, 2020-Office of the Superintendent

Albert Einstein Academy Schools Superintendent Dr. Bruce Thomas said the district is preparing for any possible local impacts from coronavirus and has a plan in place to contain the spread of the virus.

The AEA Administrative team has been vigilantly monitoring the coronavirus since it was first reported. We are prepared to implement all resources to inform parents, students & staff should health-related messaging be needed.

Although there are no known reported cases in Ohio, it's better to be safe than sorry.

Students and staff feeling any one of these types of symptoms - fever, body aches, scratchy nose or throat – should not come to school or report for work.

There are several strategies that could be implemented if needed, including reducing face-to-face contact through smaller student grouping, and maximizing learning opportunities for students who may need to stay home.

In preparation for the possibility of local detection of coronavirus, we are prepared to implement alternate dismissal of students, reduce large scale student gatherings, while increasing school cleaning cycles.

The CDC on Tuesday warned the American public to prepare for an outbreak of the disease, which has spawned more than 80,000 cases around the world but relatively few so far in the U.S.
